Bill Warner's Last Competition (The Maine Event, July 13 & 14, 2013)

Bill Warner returned to Loring Maine with the goal of breaking his 1.5-mile record of 311 mph on a one-mile course during The Maine Event, sanctioned by the Loring Timing Association. On Saturday July 13, Warner broke the 1-mile track record when he exceeded 296 mph. On Sunday, Warner reached a top speed of 286 mph before losing control of his bike that led to life ending injuries.

Before Warner shattered the top speed record in 2011, the only way motorcyclists exceeded 300 mph was by lying nearly flat on their backs inside a completely enclosed, custom-made streamliner bike — as much a rocket as a motorcycle. Many land speed-racing experts agree it may be decades before any racer approaches the accomplishments of Bill Warner.
